The production of automatic hand dryers is increasing due to the demand for a more hygienic means of providing a service that does not require the human touch. Modern influences have led us beyond the realms of simply using paper or roller towels which harbour large numbers of germs waiting to multiply on the skin of the next person to come into contact with them. The growing increase in the supply of automatic hand dryers has seen a dramatic reduction in bacterial infection and leaves us feeling safe in the fact that our high levels of sanitary needs are being met.
